DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on December 11, 2002 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 17, 20, 21 and 23-29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Suzuki et al in view of Nakajima et al. Suzuki et al discloses the claimed invention except for the express disclosure of a plug connector. Control device 25 provides an interface with sensor 17 and includes an evaluating unit 69 for digitization of data (column 7, lines 60-65) to be transmitted to engine control device ECU 5. Figure 1 clearly suggests that control device 25 is in a separate housing from the ECU. Nakajima et al teaches that it is known to provide a sensor interface with housing having a plug connector as set forth beginning at column 7, line 17. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the control device 25 of Suzuki et al with a plug connector in the housing, as taught by Nakajima et al, in order to facilitate replacement. Regarding claim 29, it would have been an obvious matter of design choice to place the interface closer to the sensor than to the engine control device since this does not effect operation of the system. See In re Kuhle, 526 F.2d 553, 188 USPQ 7 (CCPA 1975).

Claim 18 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Suzuki et al in view of Nakajima et al as applied to claims 17, 20, 21 and 23-29 above, and further in view of Ohba et al. Ohba et al teaches that it is known to provide a sensor interface circuit with a conductive casing for shielding. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to further provide the control device 25 of Suzuki et al with a conductive casing, as taught by Ohba et al, in order to protect the circuitry from electrical interference.

Claim 19 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Suzuki et al in view of Nakajima et al as applied to claims 17, 20, 21 and 23-29 above, and further in view of Frankeny et al. Frankeny et al teaches that it is known to provide a circuit casing with a cooling flange. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to further provide the control device 25 of Suzuki et al with a cooling flange, as taught by Frankeny et al, in order to protect the circuitry from excessive heat.

Claim 22 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Suzuki et al in view of Nakajima et al as applied to claims 17, 20, 21 and 23-29 above, and further in view of Matsubara et al. Matsubara et al teaches that it is known to provide a sensor interface circuit with a shielded connecting line (column 2, lines 26-38). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to further provide the control device 25 of Suzuki et al with a shielded connecting line, as taught by Matsubara et al, in order to protect the circuitry from electrical interference.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 17-29 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
